OTHER CITIES CLEANING UP

Ada Must Also Build Sentiment for Public Health and Tidiness.

THEY CLEANED THE CITY.

Three hundred thousand children in Chicago went to work with a will that made the streets clean the other day. Each child was pledged to pick up at least ten pieces of paper and they sang a song to that effect. They picked up other things, trifles like dead cats and other equally interesting anatomical subjects coming in for a share of their interest. It was at any rate a fine object lesson, and in this city it is not the children of the slums alone that need such lessons, as those who live in the residence sections of the city can attest.

A cleaning up crusade is on in Oklahoma City. Such enterprises are being started in many self-respecting towns and cities. Public health and decency demand it.

When the big cities, with their systems of sewerage and sanitary police, have to resort to these popular crusades, have to appeal directly to the men, women and children, how much more necessary is the hearty co-operation of all citizens necessary in Ada, which as yet has none of these sanitary facilities!

Right in Oklahoma City, which looks clean and tidy to the unscrutinizing visitor, they are discovering germ laden cess pools, a vast amount of unsightly and unsanitary debris—even dead varmints and fowls.

In Ada such things are encountered without looking for them. Often one has to walk around or step over them in the streets and alleys and on the sidewalks.

If everybody looks carefully after his own premises there will be few nuisances for the city officials to abate.

Once thoroughly cleaned it will be much easier for the city to be kept clean thereafter.

This afternoon let everybody look out for and pick up the unsightly things, not only the big stuff, but even sticks and paper and tins and rags and the like.

Now is the time to build up a sentiment for both healthiness and tidiness.

Go after those prizes, boys, it's more fun than base ball.

ANOTHER BLOW AT STATEHOOD

Injunction Made Perpetual Against Calling of Election for August 6

Guthrie, Oklahoma, May 14.—Word came from Alva that Judge Hancock, in a sweeping decision rendered today, sustained the injunction suit brought by Woods county to prevent the division of that county as is contemplated by the constitution. The decision also perpetuates the restraining order preventing Gov. Frantz, President Murray or Secretary Young from proclaiming an election for August 6, for the ratification of the constitution and the election of state officers.

The court held that the convention had no authority or power under the enabling act to divide the old Oklahoma counties or name election officers in the instance of Alfalfa and Major counties formed out of Woods.

W. A. Ledbetter, the convention's attorney, gave notice of appeal to the Oklahoma supreme court, where the election situation must now receive adjudication. The supreme court does not meet until the first week in June, and there is talk of requesting it to convene with this case advanced on the docket. This is usually granted where matters of great public interest are involved.

If the convention can secure a favorable decision from the supreme court before June 1, the proclamation of the election may be issued with the sixty day legal notice as required by the Oklahoma law. In such event there would be no necessity of reconvening the convention and revising the election ordinance.

PISTOL BATTLE AT ARDMORE

Candidate For Sheriff Killed—Another Injured—Many Shots Exchanged.

Ardmore, L. T., May 14.—Irb Foshee, candidate for sheriff of Carter county, was shot and almost instantly killed here yesterday afternoon by William Ballew, who is well known here. The tragedy took place on Caddo street, where the two men had had trouble just previous to the shooting.

The fatal shot struck Foshee in the neck and he turned and fell forward on his face. Foshee's brother, Jonas, who conducts a place close by, hearing the shot came to his brother's rescue and a pitched battle ensued, in which a large number of shots were fired. Neither was injured.

R. Greenburg, the owner of a fruit stand, while standing in front of his place of business, was struck in the jaw by a stray bullet and seriously hurt. It is thought he will recover.

The shooting caused great excitement, and several passers by had narrow escapes from flying missiles.

Federal officers placed Ballew under arrest. He alleges self defense, several eye witnesses to the tragedy have been summoned to the federal grand jury, now in session.

In the pocket of the dead man was recovered a pistol. Foshee was about 38 years of age, and together with his brother came to Ardmore from Nacoma, Texas. He leaves a family.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

PLUTO OWENS.

Pluto Owens, the silk stocking candidate for the U. S. senate, is beginning to see bad results from his loose thousands.

People are beginning to wonder how can a man afford to pay two hundred thousand dollars for a $5,000 job. Pluto Owens has always had a mania for money. It has been his business to go after this thing they call gold since he sat so close to the pie counter under Cleveland. He got his start then, and the people are not going to be fooled into believing that a business man and one who loves money like Pluto Owens does will be a party to spending two hundred thousand dollars for a $5,000 job.

Where did this slush fund come from? Is it possible that the National Senatorial Railroad Association, an adjunct to the Senatorial Millionaire club at Washington, has come to fair and youthful Oklahoma for a henchman? They may be after Pluto Owens; but the great democracy of Oklahoma will not let him go. It is going to send Furman from this side of the state.

It will make little difference with Bob Owens whether he is elected senator or not. He spends all his winters in Washington anyhow—has done so for years. From the visitors' gallery he will get to hear Furman speak.

PROF. ROBERT L. KNIE.

Candidate for State Superintendent

On a Platform of Progressive Education.

The Oklahoma Farmer has just received a pamphlet announcing the candidacy of Robert L. Knie of Cordell, Washita county, Oklahoma, for state superintendent of public instruction. Mr. Knie sets forth many progressive and most excellent ideas in his pamphlet which shows that he is a strong man educationally and that he has the correct ideas of the future educational system for Oklahoma. He makes a strong plea for better school advantages for the farmer boy. He says: "Is there any reason why the boy in the city should have better educational advantages than the country boy? Despite the fact that the country boy under our present educational system has been at a disadvantage he has in many instances forged ahead and we find him among the most useful and honored men in our nation."

In speaking of scientific agriculture he emphasizes the fact that farming should be a profession, and says: "Farmers are fast awakening to their necessity along educational lines. They are beginning to realize that their work should be a profession; that the farm above all other business needs thorough direction. For the promotion of the best interests in agriculture, I believe we ought to have a sub-agricultural college and experiment station in the southwest and that every county should have a model farm. We have seen agricultural work when it is not directed by scientific knowledge is wasteful in itself, and will be unable to meet—much less over-produce—the constant and ever increasing demand of the people upon its productiveness. Experience has shown us so long as farming is conducted in an unintelligent way, it will never be anything but a distasteful drudgery which will drive the best young men of the farming class into the cities where they can get work that will employ their minds as well as their muscle."

We would make other quotations but space does not permit; in fact, if we could we would reproduce the entire pamphlet. It will pay anyone interested in education to write to Mr. Knie and secure one of these pamphlets and read it. The document is worthy of preservation.—Adv.

The MYSTERY of CARNEYCROFT

By JOSEPH BROWN COOKE COPYRIGHT 1907 BY STORY-PRESS CORPORATION

CHAPTER XVI. From Another Angle.

Miss Carney knew nothing of the letter that Miss Weston had received from Mrs. Bruce, and when I saw her again, just before luncheon, she expressed great concern over her friend's condition.

"Do you know, Mr. Ware," she said anxiously, "Annie was dreadfully upset over that note this morning. She has shut herself in her room all day and even refuses to see me. I have just tried to persuade her to come down to luncheon, but she won't do it, and says she doesn't want anything sent up, either. She has so little strength now that it worries me to have her go without her meals in this way, and then, she has been crying, too, which is very bad for her and a thing that she almost never does. I could tell by the way she spoke and when she opened the door to answer me she wouldn't let me see her face."

"Perhaps she is a trifle ashamed of her ignominious collapse at the table this morning after she had expressed so much bravery only the moment before," I suggested. "She was evidently deeply affected all of a sudden, you know."

"Yes," said Miss Carney, soberly, "and I don't understand it at all. But

"I Cannot Tell You Now."

I am sure she knows nothing about the writing. How could she, Mr. Ware, when I cannot recognize it myself? It was just a nervous attack, of course, but I wish she did not take it so seriously, for the least little thing uses her up so."

Nothing was said at the luncheon table about the affair of the morning, and Miss Weston's vacant chair seemed to give an air of gloom to the whole party.

In the afternoon I wandered about the grounds by myself, trying to decide what I ought to do. The quandary I was in was not one to be easily surmounted, for, while I realized that my duty to Miss Carney, as well as my own personal inclinations in the matter, called upon me most imperatively to clear up this mystery promptly and at any cost, I was still convinced that Miss Weston's share in the affair was entirely unexpected by her and due to no wilful act of her own, and the pathetic appeal in her eyes when I handed her Mrs. Bruce's letter was enough to make me preserve her secret faithfully for the present at least.

It was beginning to grow dark as I turned to go back to the house and, when about half way up the "ghost walk," as we had jokingly named the path that led to the river, I saw Miss Weston coming slowly toward me. She must have heard my step at the same instant, and, looking up, she hastened to my side and laid her hand on my arm while her bosom rose and fell, her eyes filled with tears, and her form trembled with suppressed emotion.

"Oh, Mr. Ware," she whispered, "you were so good this morning not to let any one see that letter. It was so foolish of them to send it in that way, right through the mail, though there was only a chance that anyone but a servant would have seen it. You won't tell of it, Mr. Ware? I know you won't," she sobbed softly. "I beg of you, Mr. Ware; I beg of you, do not speak of it for a few days at least, until I can find out what should be done."

I led her to a seat by the side of the path and tried to calm her with reassuring words, but her nervousness seemed only to increase.

"I cannot tell you now what I know about it all," she went on, wiping away the tears that flowed freely down her face. "Oh, it's too terrible even to think of, and yet no one has done any wrong. You must trust me implicitly, Mr. Ware, and the time may come when I can tell you everything. But not now. I even know very little about it myself, and that little chills the very blood in my veins. May God forgive me," she murmured; "it is all my fault, and yet I have done no wrong."

You must believe that, Mr. Ware, as you would believe your own senses, and trust me in everything, or I shall go mad!"

She leaned forward weeping bitterly, and I said nothing until she began to control herself once more and choked down her sobs in an effort to speak again. Then I said gently:

"Don't say anything more about it now, Miss Weston. I am sure you will do what is best, and though I am utterly at a loss to know what you mean, I am, of course, willing to wait a reasonable time until you are able to tell me. I will trust you without question, and in every way, but you will understand that we both owe it to Miss Carney to do away with all this mystery as soon as we can. It is spoiling her pleasure in life and ruining her property, too, and, as her friends, we must not let it continue if we can possibly put a stop to it."

"Oh, yes, I know," she said, "but we mustn't stop it now. It's too soon, Mr. Ware, and if Florence should learn the truth now it would break her heart."

"Why, what do you mean?" I exclaimed. "You surely do not expect me to believe that this affair could affect Miss Carney in any way, do you?"

"Yes," she moaned, rocking back and forth in her seat and speaking with difficulty, "it would affect her and all of us here, but me, most of all, Mr. Ware; me, most of all. When the time comes it will be easier for everybody, but nothing can be done now, or things will be even worse than they are. Oh, I do wish I could tell you what little I know about it, Mr. Ware, but I cannot, and I know that you will trust me for a few days anyway."

I walked slowly with her back to the house, and, when dinner time came and she sent down her excuses, I learned that no one in the house was aware that she had been out during the day.

Miss Carney looked pale and careworn and said that she had spent the best part of the afternoon lying down and nursing a severe headache. Mrs. Randolph seemed silent and depressed and the meal passed off slow and without incident.

After the meal from the table I had planned a plan which, I thought, might relieve the situation somewhat by suggesting no one of my acquaintance in the direction of the widow's room. It was a desperate plan, but the matter squarely before her, I asked her, not necessarily an expansion of affairs, but a friendly suggestion with me in putting an end to the annoyances she had been causing.

I had not formed a bad opinion of the woman from her appearance, and a new turn things had taken made me wonder if she, like Miss Weston, might not have been drawn into this business unwittingly and in all innocence. Moreover, I was convinced that matters were far from being as tragic as Miss Weston, in her hysterical emotion, would have me believe, for I could not conceive how a staid, respectable place like Carney-Croft could, by any possibility, be drawn into an affair that might not be satisfactorily explained in one way or another.

In a word, I had no doubt that a quiet, good-natured talk with Mrs. Bruce would accomplish all that I could wish, and I was prepared to offer her money or any other inducement that she might name if she would let the matter drop. I confess that my curiosity was greatly excited, but I was willing to forego all knowledge of the underlying facts in the case if the Bruce woman and the rest of them would only depart and leave us in peace.

I approached the cottage from the rear, coming down by a short cut through the fields, and as I turned the corner of the house by the open sitting-room windows I heard a woman's voice sob out:

"Oh, I must! I must, Mrs. Bruce! I cannot live unless I do!"

Mrs. Bruce made some reply in a gentle, soothing tone of wonderful sweetness, and then she emerged from the door of the cottage with her arm affectionately around the waist of Annie Weston, who was weeping as if her heart would break. The two passed on down the little gravel walk toward the gate, while Mrs. Bruce continued to pour words of comfort into the ear of the agonized girl; and I turned and retraced my steps to the house that I might be there before Miss Weston arrived.

CHARGES AGAINST DAM CONTRACTORS.

Say Work is Not Being Properly Done—Council Investigates.

The city council held a special meeting last night at 5 o'clock. Charges had been preferred and affidavits made out by A. Kilpatrick and a man named Lavender that the work at the dam site was not being properly done. The city fathers felt that they should look into the matter, so the special meeting was called. The meeting was called to order and the affidavits read. Contractor Lumsden was present to defend himself, and stated that he was sure that with a thorough examination the city would be satisfied with the work that was being done. It was decided that the council should drive out to the dam sight this morning and inspect the work. The adjournment to meet this (Tuesday) evening at 5:40 o'clock.

We are unable to learn the attitude the council takes in this matter, whether or not they consider he charges worthy very much consideration. Of course if they are true the city can not do too much in protecting itself.

On the other hand, if the council finds that the work is being performed in a satisfactory manner, too much can not be done in exonerating the contractors.

At the meeting of the council today he matter will be settled as far as possible, and tomorrow the Nes will give account of their findings.

Robert L. Knie, in his campaign circular, makes a strong plea for thorough education for everybody in the common branches and, as an ultimate end, he advocates a system that will give every boy and girl a chance for an education in any line he may choose absolutely free. Mr. Knie's having served as president of the Teachers' Association shows that he stands high with the teachers, who will be largely instrumental in his nomination.—Adv.

No matter what complications may arise about the election the people may rest assured that democratic primary election is going to be held on June 8. So candidates may confidences, and voters may go ahead sizing up the candidates and locating carefully, each, where he must vote.

The fact is, that primary will settle all the really doubtful issues anyhow. For it will decide who are to compose the state's first corps of officers as for the constitution, everybody knows its going to be ratified just so soon as the people get a show at it.

Stonewall Picnic Postponed.

Owing to the recent rains it was impossible to hold the big picnic Wednesday, May 8th, which had been advertised to take place at the steel bridge between here and Jesse, and the committee met and decided to postpone it until Tuesday week, May 21. Everybody is cordially invited to be present and to assist in making this the biggest picnic ever held in the Chickasaw Nation. It was also decided to change the place from the bridge to Stonewall. Help advertise the occasion by telling your friends.

Robert L. Knie, county superintendent of Washita county, and candidate for state superintendent, has a successful experience as a school man in all the phases of public school work which especially fits him for the office of state superintendent. Mr. Knie is active, energetic and thoroughly conversant with the most progressive school ideas. His nomination is practically assured.—Adv.

American League Umpire in Action.

American Association Begins Its Fifth Year

Play is Started in the Various Cities With Every Indication of a Prosperous Season.

The American association has started its fifth season and it looks as if better teams would represent all the cities. With field leaders of big league experience in like positions, and teams made up of the best of young talent mixed with veterans, there is not only fast fielding and heavy hitting, but it is doubtful if there is any more inside team play in the big league clubs than there is in the American association. The fans that are supporting these teams are beginning to realize this, and this is one of the reasons for increased attendance, which is expected to reach high water mark the present season.

Comparisons of the different teams are useless just now, not only because of the uncertainties of baseball but because hardly a single team is complete at this time. However, those who are interested can hardly resist the temptation to speculate along this line. Perhaps popular selection of first division clubs around the circuit, basing opinion on the present lineups, would be Columbus, Toledo, Louisville and Kansas City. Minneapolis, however, may demand consideration among the leaders before the season is over.

All reports indicate Indianapolis has been strengthened, and Milwaukee is likely to be a strong factor in the race again. St. Paul is of doubtful caliber just now, but great things are expected of Manager Aschbach, who has strings on a number of major league players who may make that team dangerous in the championship race.

The acceptance of terms by Dick Cooley as field manager of the Louisville team has cleared the atmosphere considerably, and unless all signs fall the Colonels again will have an aggregation of hitters that should lead the league. The fielding strength of the team has not been sacrificed in the least—in fact, it appears to have been improved. The team is also strong in pitchers and catchers, but a number of the battery men still are holding out. With either Peitz or Sullivan as chief backstop the Colonels will look as strong on paper as any team in the league. The management has been particularly fortunate in having two young pitchers, Wright and Euntou, who have impressed their teammates as good enough to hold their own against the veterans who will later try to displace them.

Parent Signs Contract.

After repeatedly declining to sign a contract with the Boston American league club because the management refused him the salary that he demanded, Freddy Parent, shortstop, capitulated and attached his signature to a document which enrolls him with the team for this year. It is not known whether the player gave in to the conditions which had been imposed upon him by the management or whether the management agreed to the long term contract and high salary which had been demanded by Parent.

Good Fight Certain for Cellar Championship

American League Managers All Sure They Can Land the Pennant.

The fight for the American league pennant this season will be doll's play compared to the scrap for the cellar championship. Not one of the second division clubs of last season has a chance to finish lower than first this time, and for that we have the word of the managers, so it must be true.

Boston, which was backed over the dump last season with a superb record of lost games, came to life right at the start, in accordance with its manager's prophecy, and defeats the Athletics in a 14-inning game. Washington showed something of its early form of last season under the "born leader," Jake Stahl, and only lost to New York by a 4 to 3 score.

Detroit, in the basis on the predictions of Jennings and the ginger of the entire make-up of the team, can't finish possibly, by any course of reasoning, lower than first. Of course New York won, and that bears out Griffith's prediction of a pennant at last for the Highlanders.

McAleer is absolutely sure that his rejuvenated Browns, which he has built up in four years around Bobbie Wallace, will be in the front at the finish; and the Naps! the Naps!—well, Lajoie is certain he will bust the hoodoo 40 ways that has been hanging around the Cleveland club and its pennant aspirations.

It's ridiculous in the extreme to dope out the White Sox, world's champions of 1906, as anything else than repeaters at the pennant-winning game. Of course Connie Mack has the pennant-winning stuff in his aggregation.

It's a grand outlook for baseball all along the line in the American league. Every town will be satisfied because of having a pennant-winning team, and the roars that have gone up in the past over second division aggregations or tail-enders will be happily missing—for a little while.

AROUND THE BASES

Krueger, the California outfielder, has earned a place on the Cincinnati team by his excellent work down south. In a game against Birmingham, Krueger beat out a bunt and stole second, third and home consecutively.

Jake Stahl has gone to Bloomington, Ind., to take charge of the Hoosier ball team. Stahl had an offer from Champaign to succeed George Huff, but had already accepted the Indiana varsity offer.

Wyatt Lee, the big hitter on the Altoona club, has seen many years of service on the ball field. He also had big league service with Washington and Pittsburgh.

It would not be surprising if there was a wholesale shakeup on the Boston Americans. It is believed that Collins, Parent and several others will be traded before the season opens.

Johnny Bates is leading the Boston club in hitting, with Fred Tenney running him a close second. The whole team is hitting the ball with more vim than it displayed last fall.

INDUSTRY & MECHANICS

A BOX KITE.

Full Description as to How It May Be Made.

A simple method of constructing a box kite of the modern type is given in detail as follows: The sticks should be made of straight-grained wood, which may be either spruce, basswood, or white pine. The longitudinal corner spines, A A, should be three-eighths inches square by 42 inches long, and the four diagonal struts, B, should be one-fourth inch by one-half inch, and about 26 inches long.

Two cloth bands should be made to the exact dimensions given in the sketch and fastened to the four longitudinal sticks with one ounce tacks. It is well to mark the positions of the sticks on the cloth bands, either with a soft lead pencil or crayon, in order to have the four sides of each band exactly equal. The ends of the bands should be lapped over at least one-half inch and sewed double to give exact strength, and the edges should be carefully hemmed, making the width, when finished, exactly 12 inches. Probably the best cloth for this purpose is nainsook, although lonsdale cambric or light-weight percale will answer nearly as well.

The diagonal struts, B, should be cut a little too long, so that they will be slightly bowed when put in position, thus holding the cloth out taut and flat. They should be tied together at the points of intersection and the ends should be wound with coarse harness makers' thread, as shown at C, to prevent splitting. The small guards, D, are nailed or glued to the longitudinal sticks to prevent the struts slipping out of position. Of course the ends of the struts could be fastened to the longitudinal strips if desired, but if made as described the kite may be readily taken apart and rolled up for convenience in carrying.

The bridle knots, E, are shown in detail at H and J. H is a square knot, which may be easily loosened and shifted to a different position on the bridle, thus adjusting the lengths of F and G. A bowline knot should be tied at J, as shown, to prevent slipping. If the kite is used in a light wind, loosen the square knot and shift nearer to G, thus shortening G and lengthening F, as if a strong wind is blowing, shift towards F, thereby lengthening G and making F shorter. In a very strong wind, cautions Popular Mechanics, do not use the bridle, but fasten a string securely at K.

TO HEAT ROOM OFF KITCHEN.

How a Radiator May Be Heated From a Range Boiler.

Unsuccessful attempts to heat radiators from hot water boilers are usually due to faulty installation. The sketch herewith shows the correct way to make the connections. Instead of using valves the stop cocks A and B are used, as they offer less resistance to circulation than ordinary globe valves. Cock A must be so arranged that it cannot be closed more than two-thirds, says a correspondent of Domestic Engineering, else if cock B and cock A are inadvertently closed tight at the same time there would be danger of the waterback exploding. The operation would be as follows: By partly closing cock A any desired amount of the hot water could be forced through radiator, and by this means radiator could be kept up to the boiling point if desired, while boiler was anywhere from 100 to 120 or at any desired heat. By placing the sediment cock, as shown, the return can be kept clear of sediment. When it is desired to put the radiator out of commission it can be done by closing cock B.

The hot water supply from boiler and from heater to radiator should be run separately, as shown in the sketch.

OUR NATIONAL COAL BIN.

What the Coal Supply of the United States Amounts To.

The government's coal expert, Mr. Edward W. Parker, is quoted in the Review of Reviews as showing that if the coal areas of the United States are simply spread out in a layer six and one-half feet thick, which he considers a fair average, we should obtain 7,000 tons of coal per acre, after leaving enough coal underground to support the roof.

Our 400,000 square miles of coal territory at this rate would give up a supply of 1,500,000,000 tons in all. We used up 293,000,000 tons of coal in 1905, and 425,000,000 tons last year. In all we have used, so far, 6,000,000,000 tons—that is, we have worked out a little less than a million acres of coal up to the end of 1906.

Of course, at the rate of production during the last year or two, our coal supply would last (as nearly as we can estimate) between 4,000 and 5,000 years. From this it does not look as if there is any immediate danger of exhaustion, but the inconsistencies of statistics may be recognized when we grasp the fact that this is an entirely false point of view, in not considering the rate of interest which we must expect.

We produced as much coal in the last ten years as in all of the previous years since the United States has been a nation.

The entire coal product has doubled every ten years.

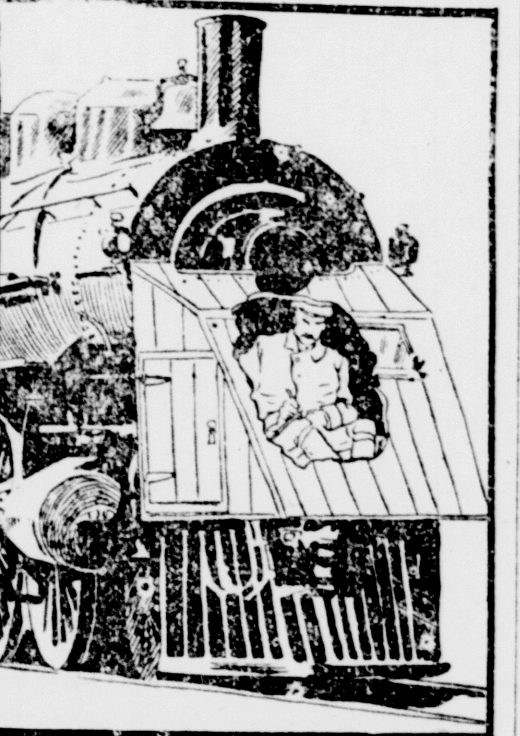

Now, if that rate of increase were to continue, the total supply would be exhausted in the next century. We do not know that that enormous rate of increase will continue, but we do not know that it will not.

Even at the present rate of production the anthracite areas of Pennsylvania will be exhausted in the next 75 or 100 years.

HOW FAST DOES SHE GO?

Perilous Work of the Speed Tester on the Locomotive.

It is one thing to take the readings of a stationary engine in a nice warm power house, but quite another to make the record of a big freight locomotive. These readings are made to secure data from which are determined the conditions under which the locomotive does its best work. When a new engine comes out of the works its record of power produced with certain amounts of fuel is taken. At intervals thereafter other similar records are obtained, and to do so the operator must ride on the pilot, a perilous and uncomfortable position.

Even in summer when exposure to the weather is much less, it requires a good deal of nerve and a cool head to do the work. The speed tester frequently is obliged to lie flat, stretched at full length across the pilot, which does not ride with the gentle motion of a Pullman. In winter a man would freeze to death in this position and a small wooden coop is built with doors at each end through which he can watch and adjust the instruments with which the "card" record is made.

The danger of the work, says Popular Mechanics, was brought to public attention last month in a collision on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, in which C. T. Runnels, a speed tester was instantly killed, his body being fearfully mangled. Although he could see the approaching smash he was caged in such a manner that it was impossible to escape.

Effect of Improvised Sleeping Accommodations on Weighty Senator.

MENIAL OFFICE HELD HIGH.

Man of Ability Willing to Be Scullion to Young Queen.

Ex-Senator Billy Mason tells of a political campaign wherein he had been called upon by the state committee to take a part. When Mason arrived at his first town, where he was to deliver a speech the next day, he found that the two so-called hotels were crowded to the doors.

Not having telegraphed for accommodations, the Illinois man discovered that he would have to make shift as best he could.

He was compelled for that night to sleep on a wire cot that had only some blankets and a sheet on it. As Mr. Mason is a man of considerable avoirdupois, he found his improvised bed anything but comfortable.

"Well," asked the proprietor when the politician appeared in the morning, "how did you sleep?"

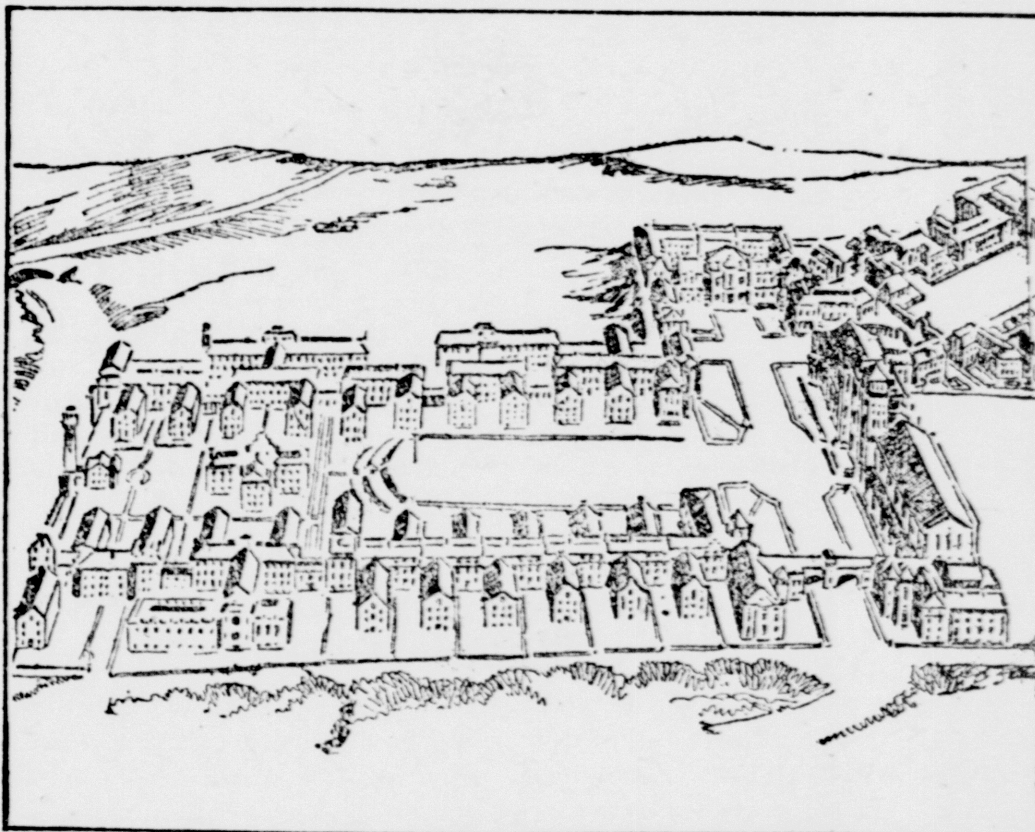

"Fairly well," answered Mason, "but I certainly looked like a waffle when I got up."

Sleep and Old Age.

There is no question that the quantity of sleep required steadily diminishes from infancy to old age. This

In the court of Louis XIV., to hold the candle at night for the king to get into bed by, and to help him on with his shirt in the morning, were the two highest honors to which his nobles could aspire. In the court of Queen Victoria the office of chief scullion to her majesty was hardly less honorable. Fancy the great philanthropist, Lord Shaftesbury, being offered, when Lord Ashley, by Peel this imposing post! Lord Ashley, having served in the Wellington administration, and having been offered by Canning a prominent administrative post, was during the ministerial crisis of 1839 asked by Peel to become chief scullion to the queen. The formation of a cabinet, Peel explained, was nothing compared with the composition of the royal household; while Lord Ashley's connection with the religious societies "marked him out as a proper attendant on a young woman upon whose moral and religious character the welfare of a million of human beings depended." Lord Ashley replied that if Peel really thought he could serve this purpose by becoming

An event of international importance in the world of art, science and popular education was the dedication of the magnificent new Carnegie institute and library of Pittsburgh, Pa., on "Founder's day," Thursday, April 11. is a rather interesting exception to the general rule that, as in so many matters, old age returns to the needs of infancy. As regards sleep, old age is more remote in its needs from infancy than is any other period of life. If elderly people obtain good sleep during the first few hours and if they have not lost that delight in reading which we all had in youth, but which so many of us curiously lose, their case is not to be grieved over. The special value of the earliest hours of sleep, by the way, has been proved by psychological experiment. The popular phrase "beauty sleep" is well warranted. It is the early (the deepest) hours of sleep that make for health and beauty.

Experience.

It was Sunday afternoon, and the infant class teacher was trying to impress the children with the beauties of the Garden of Eden. "But, children," she said, "there was one thing in the garden that Adam and Eve might not touch."

"I know," said a little boy, who had evidently had some previous knowledge of beautiful gardens; "it was poison ivy."—Harper's.

A Sardonic Definition.

"Father," said the small boy, "what is a scientist?"

"A scientist, my son, is a man who calls ordinary things by such long names that you can't recognize them."

His Most Thrilling Time.

"When a teacher asked her pupils to write an account of their most thrilling experience, one of them hesitated. Then he raised his hand.

"I've had two," he said, "pretty much alike. I don't know which to write about. They were the San Francisco earthquake and the Britt-Nelson fight."

"Well," the teacher said encouragingly, "take the one you think was really the most tremendous, the most exciting."

A little later he turned in the theme. "The doorkeeper wouldn't sell me a ticket because I was so young," it began, "but I—"

Too Much.

"That man Richerndirt is the most conceited, insufferable, vain, arrogant insolent, purseproud individual that trammels the earth," said the man with the automobile goggles.

"Why, I heard that he towed your runabout in for you yesterday," said the man with the gasoline on his coat.

"Towed it in! Darn it! He happened along in his big touring car when my little machine broke down, and I'll be hanged if he didn't rig up a derrick of some sort and swing my runabout into his tonneau and haul it in!"—Judge.

OTHER CITIES CLEANING UP

Ada Must Also Build Sentiment for Public Health and Tidiness.

THEY CLEANED THE CITY
Three hundred thousand children in Chicago went to work with a will that made the streets clean the other day. Each child was pledged to pick up at least ten pieces of paper and they sang a song to that effect. They picked up other things, trifles like dead cats and other equally interesting anatomical subjects coming in for a share of their interest. It was at any rate a fine object lesson and in this city it is not the children of the slums alone that need such lessons as those who live in the residence sections of the city can attest.

A cleaning up crusade is on in Oklahoma City. Such enterprises are being started in many self-respecting towns and cities. Public health and decency demand it.

When the big cities with their systems of sewerage and sanitary police have to resort to these popular crusades have to appeal directly to the men, women and children how much more necessary is the heavy cooperation of all citizens necessary in Ada which as yet has none of these sanitary facilities.

Right in Oklahoma City which looks clean and tidy to the unscrutinizing visitor they are discovering germ laden cess pools, a vast amount of unsightly and unsanitary debris—even dead varmints and fowls.

In Ada such things are encountered without looking for them. Often one has to walk around or step over them in the streets and alleys and on the sidewalks.

If everybody looks carefully after his own premises there will be few nuisances for the city officials to abate.

Once thoroughly cleaned it will be much easier for the city to be kept clean thereafter.

This afternoon let everybody look out for and pick up the unsightly things not only the big stuff but even sticks and paper and tins and rags and the like.

Now is the time to build up a sentiment for both healthiness and tidiness.

Go after those prizes boys. It's more fun than I use to tell.

ANOTHER BLOW AT STATEHOOD

Injunction Made Perpetual Against Calling of Election for August 6

Guthrie, Oklahoma, May 14.—Word came from Alva that Judge Pinckney in a sweeping decision rendered today sustained the injunction suit brought by Woods county to prevent the division of that county as is contemplated by the constitution. The decision also perpetuates the restraining order preventing Gov. Frantz, President Murray or Secretary Young from proclaiming an election for August 6 for the ratification of the constitution and the election of state officers.

The court held that the convention had no authority or power under the enabling act to divide the old Oklahoma counties or name election officers in the instance of Alfalfa and Major counties formed out of Woods

W. A. Ledbetter the convention's attorney gave notice of appeal to the Oklahoma supreme court where the election situation must now receive adjudication. The supreme court does not meet until the first week in June and there is talk of requesting it to convene with this case advanced on the docket. This is usually granted where matters of great public interest are involved.

If the convention can secure a favorable decision from the supreme court before June 1 the proclamation of the election may be issued with the sixty day legal notice as required by the Oklahoma law. In such event there would be no necessity of reconvening the convention and revising the election ordinance.

PISTOL BATTLE AT ARDMORE

Candidate For Sheriff Killed—Another Injured—Many Shots Exchanged.

Ardmore, May 14.—Irb Foshee, candidate for sheriff of Carter county was shot and almost instantly killed here yesterday afternoon by William Ballew who is well known here. The tragedy took place on Caddo street where the two men had had trouble just previous to the shooting.

The fatal shot struck Foshee in the neck and he turned and fell forward on his face. Foshee's brother Jonas who conducts a place close by hearing the shot came to his brother's rescue and a pitched battle ensued in which a large number of shots were fired. Neither was injured.

R. Greenburg, the owner of a fruit stand while standing in front of his place of business was struck in the jaw by a stray bullet and seriously hurt. It is thought he will recover.

The shooting caused great excitement, and several passers by had narrow escapes from flying missiles.

Federal officers placed Ballew under arrest. He alleges self defense. Several eye witnesses to the tragedy have been summoned to the federal grand jury, now in session.

Hurray for the constitution and statehood. Give us schools, school houses, law and order, removal of restrictions—the means of reaching a higher plane of citizenship.

The party that stands against statehood for the benefit of the few and the detriment of the masses sounds its own death knell in the new state forever.

It is generally conceded that Robert L. Knie will be the democratic nominee for state superintendent. He is making a clean aggressive campaign.—Adv.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way and this matters not how small is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grows out of advancing on moving products such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

PLUTO OWENS.

Pluto Owens, the silk stocking candidate for the U. S. senate, is beginning to see bad results from his loose thousand.

People are beginning to wonder how can a man afford to pay two hundred thousand dollars for a $500 job. Pluto Owens has always had a mania for money. It has been his business to go after this thing they call gold since he sat so close to the pile counter under Cleveland. He got his start then and the people are not going to be fooled into believing that a business man and one who loves money like Pluto Owens does will be a part to spending two hundred thousand dollars for a $500 job.

Where did this slush fund come from? Is it possible that the National Senatorial Railroad Association, an adjunct to the Senatorial Millionaire club at Washington has come to raid and loot the Oklahoma for a henchman. They may be after Pluto Owens. But the great democracy of Oklahoma will not let him go. It is going to send him from this side of the state.

It will make little difference with Bol Owens whether he is elected senator or not. He spends all his winters in Washington anyhow—has done so for years. From the visitors' gallery he will get to hear them speak.

PROF. ROBERT L. KNIE.

Candidate for State Superintendent

On a Platform of Progressive Education.

The Oklahoma Farmer has just received a pamphlet announcing the platform announcing the candidacy of Robert L. Knie of Cordell, Washita county, Oklahoma, for state superintendent of public instruction. Mr. Knie sets forth many progressive and most excellent ideas in his pamphlet which shows that he is a strong man educationally and that he has the correct ideas of the future educational system for Oklahoma. He makes a strong plea for better school advantages for the farmer boy. He says: "Is there any reason why the boy in the city should have better educational advantages than the country boy? Despite the fact that the country boy under our present educational system has been at a disadvantage he has in many instances forged ahead and we find him among the most useful and honored men in our nation."

In speaking of scientific agriculture he emphasizes the fact that farming should be a profession, and says: "Farmers are fast awakening to their necessity along educational lines. They are beginning to realize that their work should be a profession that the farm above all other business needs thorough direction. For the promotion of the best interests in agriculture I believe we ought to have a sub-agricultural college and experiment station in the southwest and that every county should have a model farm. We have seen agricultural work when it is not directed by scientific knowledge is wasteful in itself, and will be unable to meet—much less over-produce—the constant and ever increasing demand of the people upon its productiveness. Experience has shown us so long as farming is conducted in an unintelligent way, it will never be anything but a distasteful drudgery which will drive the best young men of the farming class into the cities where they can get work that will employ their minds as well as their muscles."

We would make other quotations but space does not permit. In fact if we could we would reproduce the entire pamphlet. It will pay anyone interested in education to write to Mr. Knie and secure one of these pamphlets and read it. The document is worthy of preservation—Adv.

The MYSTERY of CARNEYCROFT

BY JOSEPH BROWN COOKE COPYRIGHT 1907 BY STORY-PRESS CORPORATION

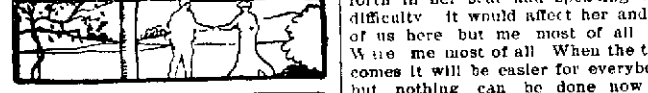

CHAPTER XVI.

From Another Angle.
Miss Carney knew nothing of the letter that Miss Weston had received from the Prince and when I saw her again just before luncheon she expressed great concern over her friend's condition.

Do you know Mr. Ware, she said anxiously. Anne was dreadfully upset over that note this morning. She has shut herself in her room all day and even refuses to see me. I have just tried to persuade her to come down to luncheon but she won't do it and says she doesn't want anything sent up either. She has so little strength now that it worries me to have her go without her meals in this way and then she has been crying too which is very bad for her and a thing that she almost never does. I could tell by the way she spoke and when she opened the door to answer me she wouldn't let me see her face.

Perhaps she is a trifle ashamed of her ignominious collapse at the table this morning after she had expressed so much bravely only the moment before. I suggested, "She was evidently deeply affected all of a sudden you know."

Yes, said Miss Carney soberly, and I don't understand it at all. But

"I Cannot Tell You Now"

I am sure she knows nothing about the writing. How could she Mr. Ware when I cannot recognize it myself? It was just a nervous attack of course but I wish she did not take it so seriously for the least little thing uses her up so.

Nothing was said at the luncheon table about the affair of the morning and Miss Weston's vacant chair seemed to give an air of gloom to the whole party.

In the afternoon I wandered about the grounds by myself trying to decide what I ought to do. The quantity of work was so great that I was almost overwhelmed for while I realized that my duty to Miss Carney as well as my own personal inclinations in the matter called upon me most imperatively to clear up this mystery promptly and at any cost I was still convinced that Miss Weston's share in the affair was entirely unexpected by her and due to no wilful act of her own and the pathetic appeal in her eyes when I handed her Mrs. Bruce's letter was enough to make me preserve her secret faithfully for the present at least.

It was beginning to grow dark as I turned to go back to the house and when about half way up the 'ghost' walk, as we had jokingly named the path that led to the river I saw Miss Weston coming slowly toward me. She must have heard my step at the same instant, and looking up she hastened to my side and laid her hand on my arm while her bosom rose and fell, her eyes filled with tears and her form trembled with suppressed emotion.

Oh Mr. Ware, she whispered, you were so good this morning not to let any one see that letter. It was so foolish of them to send it in that way, right through the mail, though there was only a chance that anyone but a servant would have seen it. You won't tell of it, Mr. Ware? I know you won't, she sobbed softly. "I beg of you, Mr. Ware, I beg of you do not speak of it for a few days at least until I can find out what should be done."

I led her to a seat by the side of the path and tried to calm her with reassuring words but her nervousness seemed only to increase.

I cannot tell you now what I know about it all she went on, wiping away the tears that flowed freely down her face. "Oh, it is too terrible even to think of, and yet no one has done any wrong. You must trust me implicitly, Mr. Ware, and the time may come when I can tell you everything. But not now I even know very little about it myself, and that little chills the very blood in my veins. May God forgive me she murmured. 'It is all my fault and yet I have done no wrong'

CHARGES AGAINST DAM CONTRACTORS.

Say Work is Not Being Properly Done—Council Investigates.

The city council held a special meeting last night at 8 o'clock. Charges had been preferred and affidavits made out by A. Kilpatrick and a man named Lavender that the work at the damsite was not being properly done.

The city fathers felt that they should look into the matter, so the special meeting was called. The meeting was called to order and the affidavits read. Contractor Lumsden was present to defend himself, and stated that he was sure that with a thorough examination the city would be satisfied with the work that was being done. It was decided that the council should drive out to the dam sight this morning and inspect the work. The adjournment to meet this (Tuesday) evening at 5:40 o'clock.

We are unable to learn the attitude the council takes in this matter, whether or not they consider the charges worthy very much consideration. Of course if they are true the city can not do too much in protecting itself.

On the other hand, if the council finds that the work is being performed in a satisfactory manner, too much can not be done in exonerating the contractors.

At the meeting of the council today the matter will be settled as far as possible, and tomorrow the News will give account of their findings.

Robert L. Knie, in his campaign circular, makes a strong plea for thorough education for everybody in the common branches and, as an ultimate end, he advocates a system that will give every boy and girl a chance for an education in any line he may choose absolutely free. Mr. Knie's having served as president of the Teachers' Association shows that he stands high with the teachers, who will be largely instrumental in his nomination.—Adv.

No matter what complications may arise about the election the people may rest assured that democratic primary election is going to be held on June 8. So candidates may confound, and voters may go ahead sizing up the candidates and locating carefully, each, where he must vote.

The fact is, that primary will settle all the really doubtful issues anyhow. For it will decide who are to compose the state's first corps of officers as for the constitution, everybody knows its going to be ratified just so soon as the people get a show at it.

American League Umpire in Action.

American Association Begins Its Fifth Year

Play is started in the various cities with every indication of a prosperous season.

The American association has started its fifth season and it looks as if better teams would represent all the cities. With field leaders of big league experience in like positions, and teams made up of the best of young talent mixed with veterans there is not only fast fielding and heavy hitting, but it is doubtful if there is any more inside team play in the big league clubs than there is in the American association. The fans that are supporting these teams are beginning to realize this, and this is one of the reasons for increased attendance, which is expected to reach high water mark the present season.

Comparisons of the different teams are useless just now, not only because of the uncertainties of baseball but because hardly a single team is complete at this time. However, those who are interested can hardly resist the temptation to speculate along this line. Perhaps popular selection of first division clubs around the circuit, basing opinion on the present lineups, would be Columbus, Toledo, Louisville and Kansas City. Minneapolis, however, may demand consideration among the leaders before the season is over.

All reports indicate Indianapolis has been strengthened, and Milwaukee is likely to be a strong factor in the race again. St. Paul is of doubtful caliber just now, but great things are expected of Manager Askebach, who has strings on a number of major league players who may make that team dangerous in the championship race.

The acceptance of terms by Dick Cooley as field manager of the Louisville team has cleared the atmosphere considerably, and unless all signs fail the Colonels again will have an aggregation of hitters that should lead the league. The holding strength of the team has not been sacrificed in the trade—in fact, it appears to have been improved. The team is also strong in pitchers and catchers, but a number of the battery men still are holding out. With either Peitz or Sullivan as chief backstop the Colonels will look as strong on paper as any team in the league. The management has been particularly fortunate in having two young pitchers, Wright and Hunter, who have impressed their teammates as good enough to hold their own against the veterans who will later try to displace them.

Parent Signs Contract.

After repeatedly declining to sign a contract with the Boston American league club because the management refused him the salary that he demanded, Freddy Parent, shortstop, capitulated and attached his signature to a document which enrolls him with the team for this year. It is not known whether the player gave in to the conditions which had been imposed upon him by the management or whether the management agreed to the long term contract and high salary which had been demanded by Parent.

Good Fight Certain for Celar Championship

American League Managers All Sure They Can Land the Pennant.

The fight for the American league pennant this season will be a hot play compared to the scrap for the cellar championship. Not one of the second division clubs of last season has a chance to finish lower than first this time, and for that we have the word of the managers, so it must be true.

Boston, which was backed over the dump last season with a superb record of last games, came to life right at the start in accordance with its manager's prophecy, and defeats the Athletics in a 11 inning game. Washington showed something of its early form of last season under the "born leader," Jake Stahl, and only lost to New York by a 1 to 3 score.

Detroit, in the basis on the predictions of Jennings and the finger of the entire make-up of the team, can't finish possibly, by any course of reasoning, lower than first. Of course New York won, and that bears out Griffith's prediction of a pennant at last to the Yankees.

McAber is absolutely sure that his rejuvenated Browns, which he has built up in four years around Bobbie Wallace, will be in the front at the finish; and the Naps—well, League is certain he will bust the hoodoo 40 ways that has been hung around the Cleveland club and its pennant aspirations.

It's ridiculous in the extreme to drop out the White Sox, would a champion of 1906, as anything else than repeaters at the pennant-winning game. Of course Connie Mack has the pennant-winning stuff in his aggregation.

It's a grand outlook for baseball all along the line in the American league. Every town will be satisfied because of having a pennant-winning team, and the roars that have gone up in the past over second division aggregations or tail-enders will be happily missing—for a little while.

AROUND THE BASES

Krueger, the California outfielder, has earned a place on the Cincinnati team by his excellent work down south. In a game against Birmingham, Krueger beat out a punt and stole second, third and home consecutively.

Jake Stahl has gone to Bloomington, Ind., to take charge of the Hoosier ball team. Stahl had an offer from Champaign to succeed George Huff, but had already accepted the Indiana varsity offer.

Wyatt Lee, the big hitter on the Altoona club, has seen many years of service on the ball field. He also had big league service with Washington and Pittsburg.

It would not be surprising if there was a wholesale shakeup on the Boston Americans. It is believed that Collins, Parent and several others will be traded before the season opens.

Johnny Bates is leading the Boston club in hitting, with Fred Tenney running him a close second. The whole team is hitting the ball with more vim than it displayed last fall.

INDUSTRY & MECHANICS

A BOX KITE.

Full Description as to How It May Be Made.

A simple method of constructing a box kite of the modern type is given in detail as follows: The sticks should be made of straight-grained wood, which may be either spruce, basswood, or white pine. The longitudinal corner spines, A, A, should be three-eighths inches square by 42 inches long, and the four diagonal struts, B, should be one-fourth inch by one-half inch, and about 26 inches long.

Two cloth bands should be made to the exact dimensions given in the sketch and fastened to the four longitudinal sticks with one ounce tacks. It is well to mark the positions of the sticks on the cloth bands, either with a soft lead pencil or crayon, in order to have the four sides of each band exactly equal. The ends of the bands should be lapped over at least one-half inch and sewed double to give exact strength, and the edges should be carefully hemmed, making the width, when finished, exactly 12 inches. Probably the best cloth for this purpose is raincoat, although lonsdale cambric or light-weight percale will answer nearly as well.

The diagonal struts, D, should be cut a little too long, so that they will be slightly bowed when put in position, thus holding the cloth out taut and flat. They should be tied together at the points of intersection and the ends should be wound with coarse harness makers' thread, as shown at C, to prevent splitting. The small guards, D, are nailed or glued to the longitudinal sticks to prevent the struts slipping out of position. Of course the ends of the struts could be fastened to the longitudinal strips if desired, but if made as described the kite may be readily taken apart and rolled up for convenience in carrying.

The bridle knots, E, are shown in detail at H and J. H is a square knot, which may be easily loosened and shifted to a different position on the bridle, thus adjusting the lengths of F and G. A bowline knot should be tied at J, as shown, to prevent slipping. If the kite is used in a light wind, loosen the square knot and shift nearer to G, thus shortening G and lengthening F, as if a strong wind is blowing, shift towards F, thereby lengthening G and making F shorter. In a very strong wind, cautious Popular Mechanics, do not use the bridle but fasten a string securely at K.

TO HEAT ROOM OFF KITCHEN.

How a Radiator May Be Heated From a Range Boiler.

Unsuccessful attempts to heat radiators from hot water boilers are usually due to faulty installation. The sketch herewith shows the correct way to make the connections. Instead of using valves the stop cocks A and B are used, as they offer less resistance to circulation than ordinary globe valves. Cock A must be so arranged that it cannot be closed more than two-thirds, says a correspondent of Domestic Engineering, else if cock B and cock A are inadvertently closed tight at the same time there would be danger of the waterback exploding. The operation would be as follows: By partly closing cock A any desired amount of the hot water could be forced through radiator, and by this means radiator could be kept up to the boiling point if desired, while boiler was anywhere from 100 to 120 or at any desired heat. By placing the sediment cock, as shown, the return can be kept clear of sediment. When it is desired to put the radiator out of commission it can be done by closing cock I.

Correct Installation of Pipes and Radiators.

The hot water supply from boiler and from heater to radiator should be run separately, as shown in the sketch.

OUR COAL SUPPLY OF THE UNITED STATES AMOUNTS TO.

The government's coal expert, Mr. Edward W. Parker, is quoted in the Review of Reviews as showing that if the coal areas of the United States are simply spread out in a layer six and one-half feet thick, which he considers a fair average, we should obtain 7,000 tons of coal per acre, after leaving enough coal underground to support the roof.

Our 400,000 square miles of coal territory at this rate would give up a supply of 1,500,000,000 tons in all. We used up 293,000,000 tons of coal in 1905, and 425,000,000 tons last year. In all we have used, so far, 6,000,000,000 tons—that is, we have worked out a little less than a million acres of coal up to the end of 1906.

Of course, at the rate of production during the last year or two, our coal supply would last (as nearly as we can estimate) between 4,000 and 5,000 years. From this it does not look as if there is any immediate danger of exhaustion, but the inconsistencies of statistics may be recognized when we grasp the fact that this is an entirely false point of view, in not considering the rate of interest which we must expect.

We produced as much coal in the last ten years as in all of the previous years since the United States has been a nation.

The entire coal product has doubled every ten years.

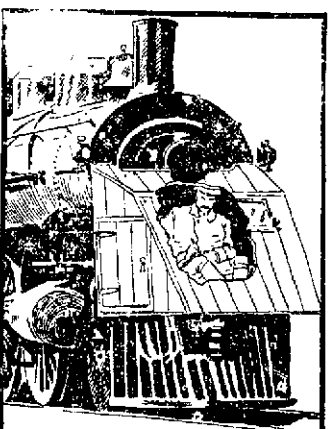

Now, if that rate of increase were to continue, the total supply would be exhausted in the next century. We do not know that that enormous rate of increase will continue, but we do not know that it will not.

Even at the present rate of production the anthracite areas of Pennsylvania will be exhausted in the next 75 or 100 years.

HOW FAST DOES SHE GO?

Perilous Work of the Speed Tester on the Locomotive.

It is one thing to take the readings of a stationary engine in a nice warm power house, but quite another to make the record of a big freight locomotive. Those readings are made to secure data from which are deter-mixed the conditions under which the locomotive does its best work. When a new engine comes out of the works its record on power produced with certain amounts of fuel is taken. At intervals thereafter other similar records are obtained, and to do so the operator must ride on the pilot, a perilous and uncomfortable position.

Even in summer when exposure to the weather is much less, it requires a good deal of nerve and a cool head to do the work. The speed tester frequently is obliged to lie flat, stretched at full length across the pilot, which does not ride with the gentle motion of a Pullman. In winter a man would freeze to death in this position and a small wooden coop is built with doors at each end through which he can watch and adjust the instruments with which the "card" record is made.

The danger of the work, says Popular Mechanics, was brought to public attention last month in a collision on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, in which C. T. Runnels, a speed tester was instantly killed, his body being fearfully mangled. Although he could see the approaching smash he was caged in such a manner that it was impossible to escape.

CHARLES H. GRAVES.

The president declined to grant an interview with Mrs. Ida Von Claussen, who had complained to the state department that United States Minister Charles H. Graves refused to present her to King Oscar. In official circles at Washington it is the opinion that Mrs. Von Claussen has no legitimate ground for complaint.

HAD MADE AN IMPRESSION.

Effect of Improvised Sleeping Accommodations on Weighty Senator.

Ex-Senator Billy Mason tells of a political campaign wherein he had been called upon by the state committee to take a part. When Mason arrived at his first town, where he was to deliver a speech the next day, he found that the two so-called hotels were crowded to the doors.

Not having telegraphed for accommodations, the Illinois man discovered that he would have to make shift as best he could.

He was compelled for that night to sleep on a wire cot that had only some blankets and a sheet on it. As Mr. Mason is a man of considerable avoirdupois, he found his improvised bed anything but comfortable.

"Well," asked the proprietor when the politician appeared in the morning, "how did you sleep?"

"Fairly well," answered Mason, "but I certainly looked like a waffle when I got up."

Sleep and Old Age.

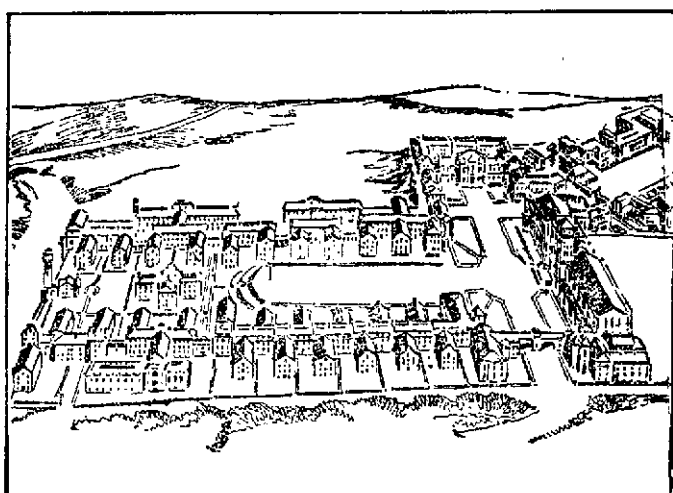

There is no question that the quantity of sleep required steadily diminishes from infancy to old age. This

Man of Ability Willing to Be Scullion to Young Queen.

In the court of Louis XIV., to hold the candle at night for the king to get into bed by, and to help him on with his shirt in the morning, were the two highest honors to which his nobles could aspire. In the court of Queen Victoria the office of chief scullion to her majesty was hardly less honorable. Fancy the great philanthropist, Lord Shaftesbury, being offered, when Lord Ashley, by Peel this imposing post! Lord Ashley, having served in the Wellington administration, and having been offered by Cannan a prominent administrative post, was during the ministerial crisis of 1830 asked by Peel to become chief scullion to the queen. The formation of a cabinet, Peel explained, was nothing compared with the composition of the royal household; while Lord Ashley's connection with the religious societies "marked him out as a proper attendant on a young woman upon whose moral and religious character the welfare of a million of human beings depended." Lord Ashley replied that if Peel really thought he could serve this purpose by becoming is a rather interesting exception to the general rule that, as in so many matters, old age returns to the needs of infancy. As regards sleep, old age is more remote in its needs from infancy than is any other period of life. If elderly people obtain good sleep during the first few hours and if they have not lost that delight in reading which we all had in youth, but which so many of us curiously lose, their ease is not to be grieved over. The special value of the earliest hours of sleep, by the way, has been proved by psychological experiment. The popular phrase "beauty sleep" is well warranted. It is the early (the deepest) hours of sleep that make for health and beauty.

Experience. It was Sunday afternoon, and the infant class teacher was trying to impress the children with the beauties of the Garden of Eden. "But, children," she said, "there was one thing in the garden that Adam and Eve might not touch."

"I know," said a little boy, who had evidently had some previous knowledge of beautiful gardens; "it was poison ivy."—Harper's.

His Most Thrilling Time.

"When a teacher asked her pupils to write an account of their most thrilling experience, one of them hesitated. Then he raised his hand.

"I've had two," he said, "pretty much alike. I don't know which to write about. They were the San Francisco earthquake and the Britt-Nelson fight."

"Well," the teacher said encouragingly, "take the one you think was really the most tremendous, the most exciting."

A little later he turned in the theme. "The doorkeeper wouldn't sell me a ticket because I was so young," it began, "but I—"

Too Much.

"That man Richerndirt is the most conceited, insufferable, vain, arrogant insolent, purisproind individual that trammels the earth," said the man with the automobile goggles.

"Why, I heard that he towed your runaway in for you yesterday," said the man with the gasoline on his coat.

"Towed it in! Darn it! He happened along in his big touring car when my little machine broke down, and I'll be hanged if he didn't rig up a derrick of some sort and swing my runaway into his tonneau and haul it in!"—Judge.

OTHER CITIES CLEANING UP

Ada Must Also Build Sentiment for Public Health and Tidiness.

THEY CLEANED THE CITY

Three hundred thousand children in Chicago went to work with a will that made the streets clean the other day. Each child was pledged to pick up at least ten pieces of paper and they sang a song to that effect. They picked up other things—tiffles like dead cats and other equally interesting anatomical subjects coming in for a share of their interest. It was at any rate a fine object lesson and in this city it is not the children of the slums alone that need such lessons as those who live in the residence sections of the city can attest.

A cleaning up crusade is on in Oklahoma City. Such enterprises are being started in many self-respecting towns and cities. Public health and decency demand it.

When the big cities with their systems of sewerage and sanitary police have to resort to these popular crusades have to appeal directly to the men, women and children how much more necessary is the heavy cooperation of all citizens necessary in Ada which as yet has none of these sanitary facilities.

Right in Oklahoma City which looks clean and tidy to the unscrutinizing visitor they are discovering germ laden cess pools a vast amount of unsightly and unsanitary debris—even dead varmits and fowls.

In Ada such things are encountered without looking for them. Often one has to walk around or step over them in the streets and alleys and on the sidewalks.

If everybody looks carefully after his own premises there will be few nuisances for the city officials to abate.

Once thoroughly cleaned it will be much easier for the city to be kept clean thereafter.

This afternoon let everybody look out for and pick up the unsightly things not only the big stuff but even sticks and paper and tins and rags and the like.

Now is the time to build up a sentiment for both healthiness and tidiness.

Go after those prizes boys. It's more fun than I use to tell.

ANOTHER BLOW AT STATEHOOD

Injunction Made Perpetual Against Calling of Election for August 6

Guthrie, Oklahoma, May 14.—Word came from Ada that Judge Pinckney in a sweeping decision rendered today sustained the injunction suit brought by Woods county to prevent the division of that county as contemplated by the constitution. The decision also perpetuates the restraining order preventing Gov. Frantz, President Murray or Secretary Young from proclaiming an election for August 6 for the ratification of the constitution and the election of state officers.

The court held that the convention had no authority or power under the enabling act to divide the old Oklahoma counties or name election officers in the instance of Alfalfa and Major counties formed out of Woods

W. A. Ledbetter the conventions attorney gave notice of appeal to the Oklahoma supreme court where the election situation must now receive adjudication. The supreme court does not meet until the first week in June and there is talk of requesting it to convene with this case advanced on the docket. This is usually granted where matters of great public interest are involved.

If the convention can secure a favorable decision from the supreme court before June 1 the proclamation of the election may be issued with the sixty day legal notice as required by the Oklahoma law. In such event there would be no necessity of reconvening the convention and revising the election ordinance.

PISTOL BATTLE AT ARDMORE

Candidate For Sheriff Killed—Another Injured—Many Shots Exchanged.

Ardmore, May 14.—(By T. Oshes.) Candidate for sheriff of Carter county was shot and almost instantly killed here yesterday afternoon by William Ballou who is well known here. The tragedy took place on Caddo street where the two men had had trouble just previous to the shooting.

The fatal shot struck Foshee in the neck and he turned and fell forward on his face. Foshee's brother Jonas who conducts a place close by hearing the shot came to his brother's rescue and a pitched battle ensued in which a large number of shots were fired. Neither was injured.

R. Greenburg, the owner of a fruit stand while standing in front of his place of business was struck in the jaw by a stray bullet and seriously hurt. It is thought he will recover.

The shooting caused great excitement, and several passers by had narrow escapes from flying missiles.

Federal officers placed Ballou under arrest. He alleges self defense. Several eye witnesses to the tragedy have been summoned to the federal grand jury, now in session.

In the pocket of the dead man was recovered a pistol. Foshee was about 35 years of age, and together with his brother came to Ardmore from Na-

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way and this it matters not how small is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

PLATO OWENS.

Plato Owens, the silk stocking candidate for the U. S. senate, is beginning to see bad results from his loose trousers.

People are beginning to wonder how can a man afford to pay two hundred thousand dollars for a $3,000 job. Plato Owens has always had a mania for money. It has been his business to go after this thing they call gold since he sat so close to the pie counter under Cleveland. He got his start then and the people are not going to be fooled into believing that a business man and one who loves money like Plato Owens does will be a part to spending two hundred thousand dollars for a $3,000 job.

Where did this slush fund come from? Is it possible that the National Senatorial Railroad Association, an adjunct to the Senatorial Millionaire club at Washington has come to take and contribute Oklahoma for a henchman. They may be after Plato Owens, but the great democracy of Oklahoma will not let him go. It is going to send him from this side of the state.

It will make little difference with Bol Owens whether he is elected senator or not. He spends all his winters in Washington anyhow—has done so for years. From the visitors gallery he will get to hear Plutonium speak.

PROF. ROBERT L. KNIE.

Candidate for State Superintendent
On a Platform of Progressive Education.

The Oklahoma Farmer has just received a pamphlet announcing the platform announcing the candidacy of Robert L. Knie of Cordell, Washita county, Oklahoma, for state superintendent of public instruction. Mr. Knie sets forth many progressive and most excellent ideas in his pamphlet which shows that he is a strong man educationally and that he has the correct idea of the future educational system for Oklahoma. He makes a strong plea for better school advantages for the farmer boy. He says: "Is there any reason why the boy in the city should have better educational advantages than the country boy?" Despite the fact that the country boy under our present educational system has been at a disadvantage he has in many instances forged ahead and we find him among the most useful and honored men in our nation.

In speaking of scientific agriculture he emphasizes the fact that farming should be a profession and says: "Farmers are fast awakening to their necessity along educational lines. They are beginning to realize that their work should be a profession, that the farm above all other business needs thorough direction. For the promotion of the best interests in agriculture I believe we ought to have a sub-agricultural college and experiment station in the southwest and that every county should have a model farm. We have seen agricultural work when it is not directed by scientific knowledge is wasteful in itself, and will be unable to meet—much less over-produce—the constant and ever increasing demand of the people upon its productiveness. Experience has shown us so long as farming is conducted in an unintelligent way, it will never be anything but a distasteful drudgery which will drive the best young men of the farming class into the cities where they can get work that will employ their minds as well as their muscles.

We would make other quotations but space does not permit. In fact if we could we would reproduce the entire pamphlet. It will pay anyone interested in education to write to Mr. Knie and secure one of these pamphlets and read it. The document is worthy of preservation.—Adv.

The MYSTERY of CARNEYCROFT

by JOSEPH BROWN COOKE COPYRIGHT 1907 BY STORY-PRESS CORPORATION

CHAPTER XVI.

From Another Angle.

Miss Carney knew nothing of the letter that Miss Weston had received from Mrs. Bruce and when I saw her again just before luncheon she expressed great concern over her friend's condition.

"Do you know Mr. Ware," she said anxiously, "Annie was dreadfully upset over that note this morning. She has shut herself in her room all day and even refuses to see me. I have just tried to persuade her to come down to luncheon but she won't do it and says she doesn't want anything sent up either. She has so little strength now that it worries me to have her go without her meals in this way and then she has been crying too, which is very bad for her and a thing that she almost never does. I could tell by the way she spoke and when she opened the door to answer me she wouldn't let me see her face."

Perhaps she is a trifle ashamed of her ignominious collapse at the table this morning after she had expressed so much bravely only the moment before. I suggested, "She was evidently deeply affected all of a sudden you know."

"Yes," said Miss Carney soberly, "I don't understand it at all. But"

Yes, she moaned rocking back and forth in her seat and speaking with difficulty. It would affect her and all of us here but the most of all Mr. Ware. We must most of all. When the time comes it will be easier for everybody but nothing can be done now or things will be even worse than they are. Oh I do wish I could tell you what little I know about it. Mr. Ware but I cannot and I know that you will trust me for a few days anyway.

I walked slowly with her back to her house and when dinner time came and she sent down her excuses I learned that no one in the house was aware that she had been out during the day.

Miss Carney looked pale and strained as she sat at the table. I noticed that she was not eating.

I had a vision of a woman in a white dress and a man in a suit. I saw them in a room with a large window.

"I cannot tell you now," I said. I am sure she knows nothing about the writing. How could she Mr. Ware when I cannot recognize it myself? It was just a nervous attack of course but I wish she did not take it so seriously for the least little thing uses her up so.

Nothing was said at the luncheon table about the affair of the morning and Miss Weston's vacant chair seemed to give an air of gloom to the whole party.

In the afternoon I wandered about the grounds by myself trying to decide what I might do. The quantity of work was not one to be easily surmounted for while I realized that my duty to Miss Carney as well as my own personal inclinations in the matter called upon me most imperatively to clear up this mystery promptly and at any cost I was still convinced that Miss Weston's share in the affair was entirely unexpected by her and due to no wilful act of her own and the pathetic appeal in her eyes when I handed her Mrs. Bruce's letter was enough to make me preserve her secret faithfully for the present at least.

It was beginning to grow dark as I turned to go back to the house and, when about half way up the 'ghost' walk, as we had jokingly named the path that led to the river I saw Miss Weston coming slowly toward me. She must have heard my step at the same instant and looking up she hastened to my side and laid her hand on my arm while her bosom rose and fell, her eyes filled with tears and her form trembled with suppressed emotion.

"Oh Mr. Ware," she whispered, "you were so good this morning not to let any one see that letter. It was so foolish of them to send it in that way, right through the mail, though there was only a chance that anyone but a servant would have seen it. You won't tell of it, Mr. Ware? I know you won't," she sobbed softly. "I beg of you, Mr. Ware, I beg of you do not speak of it for a few days at least until I can find out what should be done."

I led her to a seat by the side of the path and tried to calm her with reassuring words but her nervousness seemed only to increase.

I cannot tell you now what I know about it all she went on, wiping away the tears that flowed freely down her face. "Oh, it's too terrible even to think of, and yet no one has done any wrong. You must trust me implicitly, Mr. Ware, and the time may come when I can tell you everything. But not now I even know very little about it myself, and that little chills the very blood in my veins. May God forgive me she murmured. 'It is all my fault and yet I have done no wrong'

you must believe that Mr. Ware, as you would believe your own senses, and trust me in everything or I shall go mad."

She leaned forward weeping bitterly and I said nothing until she began to control herself once more and broke down her sobs in an effort to leave again. Then I said gently:

"Don't say anything more about it now Miss Weston. I am sure you will do what is best and though I am utterly at a loss to know what you mean I am of course willing to wait a reasonable time until you are able to tell me. I will trust you without question, and in every way but you will understand that we both owe it to Miss Carney to do away with all this mystery as soon as we can. It is spoiling her pleasure in life and ruining her property too, and as her friends, we must not let it continue. It we can possibly put a stop to it."

"Oh yes I know," she said, "but we mustn't stop it now. It's too soon. Mr. Ware and if Florence should learn the truth now it would break her heart."

"Why what do you mean?" I exclaimed. "You surely do not expect me to believe that this affair could affect Miss Carney in any way do you?"

"Yes," she moaned rocking back and forth in her seat and speaking with difficulty. It would affect her and all of us here but the most of all Mr. Ware. We must most of all. When the time comes it will be easier for everybody but nothing can be done now or things will be even worse than they are. Oh I do wish I could tell you what little I know about it. Mr. Ware but I cannot and I know that you will trust me for a few days anyway."

I walked slowly with her back to her house and when dinner time came and she sent down her excuses I learned that no one in the house was aware that she had been out during the day.

CHARGES AGAINST DAM CONTRACTORS.

Say Work is Not Being Properly Done—Council Investigates.

The city council held a special meeting last night at 5 o'clock. Charges had been preferred and affidavits made out by A. Kilpatrick and a man named Lavender that the work at the dam site was not being properly done. The city fathers felt that they should look into the matter, so the special meeting was called. The meeting was called to order and the affidavits read. Contractor Lumsden was present to defend himself, and stated that he was sure that with a thorough examination the city would be satisfied with the work that was being done. It was decided that the council should drive out to the dam sight this morning and inspect the work. The adjournment to meet this (Tuesday) evening at 5:40 o'clock.

We are unable to learn the attitude the council takes in this matter, whether or not they consider the charges worthy very much consideration. Of course if they are true the city can not do too much in protecting itself.

On the other hand, if the council finds that the work is being performed in a satisfactory manner, too much can not be done in exonerating the contractors.

At the meeting of the council today he matter will be settled as far as possible, and tomorrow the News will give account of their findings.

American League Umpire in Action.

American Association Begins Its Fifth Year

Play Is Started in the Various Cities with Every Indication of a Prosperous Season.

The American association has started its fifth season and it looks as if better teams would represent all the cities. With field leaders of big league experience in like positions, and teams made up of the best of young talent mixed with veterans there is not only fast fielding and heavy hitting, but it is doubtful if there is any more inside team play in the big league clubs than there is in the American association. The fans that are supporting these teams are beginning to realize this, and this is one of the reasons for increased attendance, which is expected to reach high water mark the present season.

Comparisons of the different teams are useless just now, not only because of the uncertainties of baseball but because hardly a single team is complete at this time. However, those who are interested can hardly resist the temptation to speculate along this line. Perhaps popular selection of first division clubs around the circuit, basing opinion on the present lineup, would be Columbus, Toledo, Louisville and Kansas City. Minneapolis, however, may demand consideration among the leaders before the season is over.

All reports indicate Indianapolis has been strengthened, and Milwaukee is likely to be a strong factor in the race again. St. Paul is of doubtful caliber just now, but great things are expected of Manager Ashbach, who has strings on a number of major league players who may make that team dangerous in the championship race.

The acceptance of terms by Dick Cooley as field manager of the Louisville team has cleared the atmosphere considerably, and unless all signs fail the Colonels again will have an appreciation of hitters that should lead the league. The holding strength of the team has not been sacrificed in the least—in fact, it appears to have been improved. The team is also strong in pitchers and catchers, but a number of the battery men still are holding out. With either Peltz or Sullivan as chief backstop the Colonels will look as strong on paper as any team in the league. The management has been particularly fortunate in having two young pitchers, Wright and Euston, who have impressed their teammates as good enough to hold their own against the veterans who will later try to displace them.

Parent Signs Contract.

After repeatedly declining to sign a contract with the Boston American league club because the management refused him the salary that he demanded, Freddy Parent, shortstop, capitulated and attached his signature to a document which enrolls him with the team for this year. It is not known whether the player gave in to the conditions which had been imposed upon him by the management or whether the management agreed to the long term contract and high salary which had been demanded by Parent.

Good Fight Certain for Celar Championship

American League Managers All Sure They Can Land the Pennant.

The fight for the American league pennant this season will be a hot play compared to the scrap for the cellar championship. Not one of the second division clubs of last season has a chance to finish lower than first this time, and for that we have the word of the managers, so it must be true.

Boston, which was backed over the dump last season with a superb record of lost games, came to life right at the start in accordance with its manager's prophecy, and defeats the Athletics in a 11 inning game. Washington showed something of its early form of last season under the "horn leader," Jake Stahl, and only lost to New York by a 1 to 3 score.

Detroit, in the bases on the predictions of Jennings and the ginger of the entire makeup of the team, can't finish possibly by any course of reasoning lower than first. Of course New York won, and that bears out Griffith's prediction of a pennant at last, to the Heatlanders.

McAber is absolutely sure that his rejuvenated Indians, which he has built up in four years around Bobbie Wallace, will be in the front at the finish; and the Naps' the Naps'—well, League is certain he will bust the hoodoo 40 ways that has been hanging around the Cleveland club and its pennant aspirations.

It's ridiculous in the extreme to deplore the White Sox, world's champions of 1906, as anything else than repeaters at the pennant-winning game. Of course Connie Mack has the pennant-winning stuff in his aggregation.

It's a grand outlook for baseball all along the line in the American league. Every town will be satisfied because of having a pennant-winning team, and the roars that have gone up in the past over second division aggregations or tail-enders will be happily missing—for a little while.

AROUND THE BASES

Krueger, the California outfielder, has earned a place on the Cincinnati team by his excellent work down south. In a game against Birmingham, Krueger beat out a punt and stole second, third and home consecutively.

Jake Stahl has gone to Bloomington, Ind., to take charge of the Hoosier ball team. Stahl had an offer from Champaign to succeed George Huff, but had already accepted the Indiana varsity offer.

Wyntz Len, the big hitter on the Altoona club, has seen many years of service on the ball field. He also had big league service with Washington and Pittsburgh.

It would not be surprising if there was a wholesale shakeup on the Boston Americans. It is believed that Collins, Parent and several others will be traded before the season opens.

Johnny Bates is leading the Boston club in hitting, with Fred Tenney running him a close second. The whole team is hitting the ball with more vim than it displayed last fall.

INDUSTRY & MECHANICS

A BOX KITE.

Full Description as to How It May Be Made.

A simple method of constructing a box kite of the modern type is given in detail as follows: The sticks should be made of straight-grained wood, which may be either spruce, basswood, or white pine. The longitudinal corner spines, A, A, should be three-eighths inches square by 42 inches long, and the four diagonal struts, B, should be one-fourth inch by one-half inch, and about 26 inches long.

Two cloth bands should be made to the exact dimensions given in the sketch and fastened to the four longitudinal sticks with one ounce tacks. It is well to mark the positions of the sticks on the cloth bands, either with a soft lead pencil or crayon, in order to have the four sides of each band exactly equal. The ends of the bands should be lapped over at least one-half inch and sewed double to give exact strength, and the edges should be carefully hemmed, making the width, when finished, exactly 12 inches. Probably the best cloth for this purpose is nainsook, although lonsdale cambric or light-weight percale will answer nearly as well.

The diagonal struts, B, should be cut a little too long, so that they will be slightly bowed when put in position, thus holding the cloth out taut and flat. They should be tied together at the points of intersection and the ends should be wound with coarse harness makers' thread, as shown at C, to prevent splitting. The small guards, D, are nailed or glued to the longitudinal sticks to prevent the struts slipping out of position. Of course the ends of the struts should be fastened to the longitudinal strips if desired, but if made as described the kite may be readily taken apart and rolled up for convenience in carrying.

The bridle knots, E, are shown in detail at H and J. It is a square knot, which may be easily loosened and shifted to a different position on the bridle, thus adjusting the lengths of F and G. A bowline knot should be tied at J, as shown, to prevent slipping. If the kite is used in a light wind, loosen the square knot and shift nearer to G, thus shortening G and lengthening F, as if a strong wind is blowing, shift towards F, thereby lengthening G and making F shorter. In a very strong wind, cautions Popular Mechanics, do not use the bridle but fasten a string securely at K.

TO HEAT ROOM OFF KITCHEN.

How a Radiator May Be Heated From a Range Boiler.

Unsuccessful attempts to heat radiators from hot water boilers are usually due to faulty installation. The sketch herewith shows the correct way to make the connections. Instead of using valves the stop cocks A and B are used, as they offer less resistance to circulation than ordinary globe valves. Cock A must be so arranged that it cannot be closed more than two-thirds, says a correspondent of Domestic Engineering, else if cock B and cock A are inadvertently closed tight at the same time there would be danger of the waterback exploding. The operation would be as follows: By partly closing cock A any desired amount of the hot water could be forced through radiator, and by this means radiator could be kept up to the boiling point if desired, while boiler was anywhere from 100 to 120 or at any desired heat. By placing the sediment cock, as shown, the return can be kept clear of sediment. When it is desired to put the radiator out of commission it can be done by closing cock B.

Correct Installation of Pipes and Radiators.

The hot water supply from boiler and from heater to radiator should be run separately, as shown in the sketch.

Brown Sugar in Mortar.

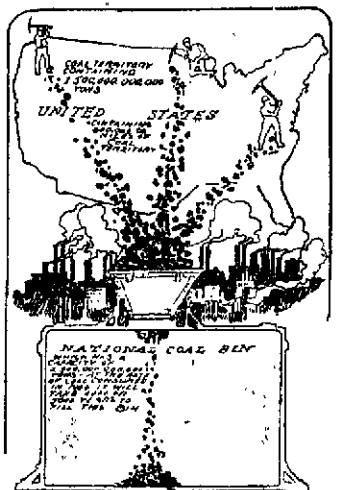

Experiments are being made with brown sugar which is said to greatly increase the adhesive properties of mortar. Equal parts of sand and lime are mixed.

OUR NATIONAL COAL MIN.

What the Coal Supply of the United States Amounts To.

The government's coal expert, Mr. Edward W. Parker, is quoted in the Review of Reviews as showing that if the coal areas of the United States are simply spread out in a layer six and one-half feet thick, which he considers a fair average, we should obtain 7,000 tons of coal per acre, after leaving enough coal underground to support the roof.

Our 400,000 square miles of coal territory at this rate would give us a supply of 1,500,000,000 tons in all. We used up 393,000,000 tons of coal in 1905, and 425,000,000 tons last year. In all we have used, so far, 6,000,000,000 tons—that is, we have worked out a little less than a million acres of coal up to the end of 1906.

Of course, at the rate of production during the last year or two, our coal supply would last (as nearly as we can estimate) between 4,000 and 5,000 years. From this it does not look as if there is any immediate danger of exhaustion, but the inconsistencies of statistics may be recognized when we grasp the fact that this is an entirely false point of view, in not considering the rate of interest which we must expect.

We produced as much coal in the last ten years as in all of the previous years since the United States has been a nation.

The entire coal product has doubled every ten years.

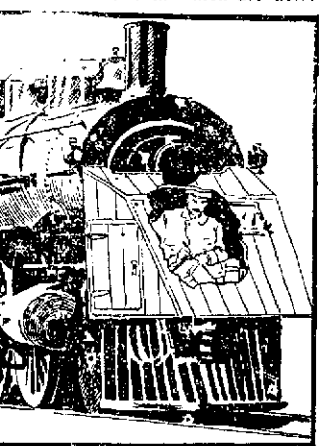

Now, if that rate of increase were to continue, the total supply would be exhausted in the next century. We do not know that that enormous rate of increase will continue, but we do not know that it will not.

Even at the present rate of production the anthracite areas of Pennsylvania will be exhausted in the next 75 or 100 years.

mined the conditions under which the locomotive does its best work. When a new engine comes out of the works its record of power produced with certain amounts of fuel is taken. At intervals thereafter other similar records are obtained, and to do so the operator must ride on the pilot, a perilous and uncomfortable position.

Even in summer when exposure to the weather is much less, it requires a good deal of nerve and a cool head to do the work. The speed tester frequently is obliged to lie flat, stretched at full length across the pilot, which does not ride with the gentle motion of a Pullman. In winter a man would freeze to death in this position and a small wooden coop is built with doors at each end through which he can watch and adjust the instruments with which the "card" record is made.

The danger of the work, says Popular Mechanics, was brought to public attention last month in a collision on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, in which C. T. Rinnels, a speed tester was instantly killed, his body being fearfully mangled. Although he could see the approaching smash he was caged in such a manner that it was impossible to escape.

CHARLES H. GRAVES.

The president declined to grant an interview with Mrs. Ida Von Clausen, who had complained to the state department that United States Minister Charles H. Graves refused to present her to King Oscar. In official circles at Washington it is the opinion that Mrs. Von Clausen has no legitimate ground for complaint.

HAD MADE AN IMPRESSION.

Effect of Improvised Sleeping Accommodations on Weighty-Senator.

Ex-Senator Billy Mason tells of a political campaign wherein he had been called upon by the state committee to take a part. When Mason arrived at his first town, where he was to deliver a speech the next day, he found that the two so-called hotels were crowded to the doors.

Not having telegraphed for accommodations, the Illinois man discovered that he would have to make shift as best he could.

He was compelled for that night to sleep on a wire cot that had only some blankets and a sheet on it. As Mr. Mason is a man of considerable avoirdupois, he found his improvised bed anything but comfortable.

"Well," asked the proprietor when the politician appeared in the morning, "how did you sleep?"

"Fairly well," answered Mason. "but I certainly looked like a waffle when I got up."

Sleep and Old Age.

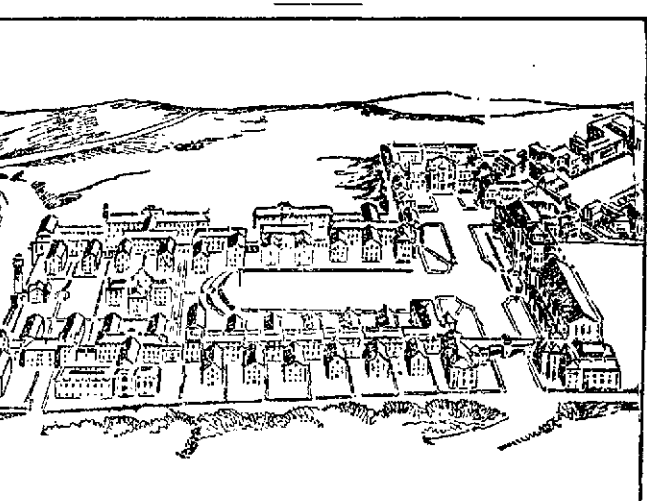

There is no question that the quantity of sleep required steadily diminishes from infancy to old age. This

MENIAL OFFICE HELD HIGH.

Man of Ability Willing to Be Scullion to Young Queen.

In the court of Louis XIV., to hold the candle at night for the king to get into bed by, and to help him on with his shirt in the morning, were the two highest honors to which his nobles could aspire. In the court of Queen Victoria the office of chief scullion to her majesty was hardly less honorable. Fancy the great philanthropist, Lord Shaftesbury, being offered, when Lord Ashley, by Peel this imposing post! Lord Ashley, having served in the Wellington administration, and having been offered by Canning a prominent administrative post, was during the ministerial crisis of 1839 asked by Peel to become chief scullion to the queen. The formation of a cabinet, Peel explained, was nothing compared with the composition of the royal household; while Lord Ashley's connection with the religious societies "marked him out as a proper attendant on a young woman upon whose moral and religious character the welfare of a million of human beings depended." Lord Ashley replied that if Peel really thought he could serve this purpose by becoming DEDICATE CARNEGIE MAGNIFICENT GIFT.

TECHNICAL SCHOOLS AS THEY ARE TO BE WHEN FINISHED. An event of international importance in the world of art, science and popular education was the dedication of the magnificent new Carnegie institute and library of Pittsburgh, Pa., on "Founder's day," Thursday, April 11. When the technical schools are completed the whole will represent an expenditure of fully $25,000,000.

is a rather interesting exception to the general rule that, as in so many matters, old age returns to the needs of infancy. As regards sleep, old age is more remote in its needs from infancy than is any other period of life. If elderly people obtain good sleep during the first few hours and if they have not lost that delight in reading which we all had in youth, but which so many of us curiously lose, their case is not to be grieved over. The special value of the earliest hours of sleep, by the way, has been proved by psychological experiment. The popular phrase "heavy sleep" is well warranted. It is the early (the deepest) hours of sleep that make for health and beauty.

Experience.

It was Sunday afternoon, and the infant class teacher was trying to impress the children with the beauties of the Garden of Eden. "But, children," she said, "there was one thing in the garden that Adam and Eve might not touch."

"I know," said a little boy, who had evidently had some previous knowledge of beautiful gardens; "it was poison ivy."—Harpur's.

His Most Thrilling Time.

"When a teacher asked her pupils to write an account of their most thrilling experience, one of them hesitated. Then he raised his hand.

"I've had two," he said, "pretty much alike. I don't know which to write about. They were the San Francisco earthquake and the Britt-Nelson fight."

"Well," the teacher said encouragingly, "take the one you think was really the most tremendous, the most exciting."

A little later he turned in the theme. "The doorkeeper wouldn't sell me a ticket because I was so young," it began, "but I—"

Too Much.

"That man Rieberndirt is the most conceited, insufferable, vain, arrogant insolent, purse-proud individual that tramples the earth," said the man with the automobile goggles.

"Why, I heard that he towed your runabout in for you yesterday," said the man with the gasoline on his coat.

"Towed it in? Darn it! He happened along in his big touring car when my little machine broke down, and I'll be hanged if he didn't rig up a derrick of some sort and swing my runabout into his tonneau and haul it in!"—Judge.
